The market has been on a pretty even keel today and free from any great excitement or much animation on any month, though January, as usual of late, shows a reasonably full number of contracts changing hands. The fluctuation on values covers a range of only about four or five cents, and the business was confined to the execution of a few orders, the limits of which were reached on the change of price, and there has also been a little scribbling by operators who work for quick turns. Generally the trade was moderate in mind and exhibited much caution about entering into any new engagements. The market, also, appeared to show an undecided feeling, and this has served to hold the market at a standstill. The crop movement takes no radically new form, on the whole the promises for next week's supply are pretty full. At the close of the day was slow, with the tone of the market only slightly better than at one and two points under last evening.

FINANCIAL.
Business yesterday on Madison street was working more slowly than for the month past, and apparently was getting into the old routine. A considerable amount of money is going to the country, and the general demand for money is good, but not so much as it was some time back. Cotton buyers are bringing in their bills more freely, and collections continue good. Exchange on London is fair and quiet, and was quoted at 100 and 100 1/2. The following are the latest New York telegrams of the day:
